Subject: Georgia High School Association (GHSA) Reclassification

Summary:

The Georgia High School Association reclassification is a periodic process where high schools are placed into classifications based on enrollment numbers. It aims to ensure fair competition among schools of similar size. The reclassification considers various factors, including student population, and may lead to schools moving up or down in classifications for sports and other activities.

Background:

GHSA (Georgia High School Association) has recently reclassified regions. Reclassification of schools happens every 2 years. From the result of reclassification Central, Southwest, and Northeast have moved down to Division I 2-A, Rutland and Westside have been moved to region 2-AA, while Howard is in region 4AAA.This reclassification, influenced by factors such as travel, revenue, and time away from school, is designed to optimize the competitive balance and logistical aspects for the involved schools during the specified period.
