

Instructional Resources Addendum Everway/News2You (N2Y)

News-2-You and Unique Learning System are designed to provide flexible access to instructional content for students with significant cognitive disabilities. During the reporting period (August 1, 2025–April 30, 2026), 646 students associated with News-2-You and 597 students associated with Unique Learning System.

Teachers may utilize materials through paper-and-pencil activities, interactive lessons on the Promethean Board, whole-group instruction, small-group activities, or digital access when appropriate. As reflected in usage patterns, student logins do not fully capture instructional implementation. On average, approximately 9 students accessed News-2-You and 10 students accessed Unique Learning System per day, while a significant number of students (457 for News-2-You and 375 for Unique Learning System) did not log in independently during the reporting period.

Student login practices vary based on individual needs and classroom resources. Due to the unique nature of students' disabilities, many students are unable to independently access or manage usernames and passwords. As a result, these platforms are frequently used as shared instructional tools led by teachers rather than as independent student logins.

Both programs serve as instructional resources during whole-group and small-group lessons, with teachers facilitating access to ensure meaningful participation. Unique Learning System is also used as a secondary resource to support individualized instruction, standards-based lessons, and targeted skill development. Teachers implement the access method that best aligns with students' instructional and accessibility needs.
