

From: Peasley, Donald <Donald.Peasley@ed.gov>

Sent: Tuesday, December 4, 2018 3:41 PM

Cc: Rooney, Patrick <Patrick.Rooney@ed.gov>

Subject: Question About the Innovative Assessment Demonstration Authority Application

Thanks for taking a few minutes to discuss the Innovative Assessment Demonstration Authority (IADA) application today. I responding to a question from Dr. Woods regarding that conversation (please share this response with him, I don't have his email address).

To summarize, I would like to affirm that a State may propose two different models of innovative assessment in their IADA application. If a State chose to propose more than one innovative model, then it should be sure to describe how, over the course of the period of the authority, it would evaluate and select one of those models for possible expansion to Statewide use.

Please let us know if you have any other questions. Thanks.

Don

Donald Peasley, Ph.D.

Assessment Team Lead, Office of State Support (OSS)

US Department of Education

Donald.peasley@ed.gov Ph. 202 453 7982